

A Tea Bowl

茶碗

Room 3

the British Museum

September 9th to November 9th, 2013

The British Museum

Supported by:

- Reason for the Idea of the Exhibition

In a high-speed modern globe, especially huge cities like London, Beijing, etc., every element on the track of society, in order to adapt to the existed developing rhythm, is difficult to stop itself and to have a little time to enjoy life, which is instinct of human itself.

Through a simple tea bowl, which from ancient China to today, staying as an indispensable object in daily life of every society, the exhibition would like to, through human's 5 basic senses, guide the audience to calm themselves down in an quiet and peace atmosphere, to experience a simple life in traditional Chinese tea culture.

Sight, hearing, smell, taste, and touch consist the 5 most basic senses of human body, the exhibition is also a great choice for disabled person, they can here experience the whole exhibition.